Lucy's Golden Run

A Tribute Song

Intro

grand piano, sweeping strings

Verse 1

The sound of tiny nails upon the floor,
A joyful echo heard so many times before.
You'd jump up on the bed, a playful, happy sound,
With barking, howling love, the sweetest to be found.
A tiny Yorkie spirit, bright and full of grace,
Always eager for attention, in your special place.

Chorus

Oh, Lucy, my sweet girl, thirteen years flew by,
Beneath the same bright sun, beneath the same vast sky.
Your memory a melody, a comfort to my heart,
Though we are now for a little while apart.

Verse 2

When bedtime came each night, a familiar, cozy scene,
You'd gently steal my pillow, my sleepy little queen.
And if I ever missed a meal, or lingered in my chair,
A scratch upon my foot would show how much you cared.
So full of little quirks, and tender, loyal ways,
You filled my world with sunshine through all our precious days.

Chorus

Oh, Lucy, my sweet girl, thirteen years flew by,
Beneath the same bright sun, beneath the same vast sky.
Your memory a melody, a comfort to my heart,
Though we are now for a little while apart.

Lucy's Golden Run (continued)

Bridge

The quiet lingers now, where laughter used to bloom,
But love like ours can banish every hint of gloom.
Until we meet again, I whisper to the air,
Love you, my sweet girl, beyond all earthly care.

Instrumental

strings, oboe

Final Chorus

Oh, Lucy, my sweet girl, thirteen years flew by,
Beneath the same bright sun, beneath the same vast sky.
Your memory a melody, a comfort to my heart,
Though we are now for a little while apart.

Outro

Now running free, light as a gentle breeze,
Across the verdant fields and through the ancient trees.
With Robbie by your side, beneath the heavens bright,
You're safe and joyful now, bathed in eternal light.
