Intro - grand piano, cello

Verse 1

The recliner chair, a soft, warm place,
Your tuxedo fur, a gentle grace.
With fluffy blankets, you would softly rest,
A comfort found upon my loving chest.
I'd kiss your head, your sweet, soft scent,
A quiet joy, Heaven-sent.
My darling cat, my heart's delight,
You filled my days with gentle light.

Chorus

Oh Percy, my sweet and handsome boy,
Sixteen long years of love and joy.
Your gentle spirit, ever near,
Washing away each doubt and fear.
Though you are gone, your memory stays,
Through all my future nights and days.

Verse 2

In the quiet of the morning's gleam,
I'd wake and look, as in a dream.
To find you sleeping, calm and deep,
While all the world was still asleep.
Your soft purr, a gentle song,
Where you belonged, is where I'd long.
My little shadow, by my side,
With nowhere left for pain to hide.

Chorus

Oh Percy, my sweet and handsome boy,
Sixteen long years of love and joy.
Your gentle spirit, ever near,
Washing away each doubt and fear.
Though you are gone, your memory stays,
Through all my future nights and days.

Verse 3

No more the illness, sharp and deep,
While in sweet slumber, you now sleep.
The long dark nights of pain are gone,
You greet with joy each rising dawn.
Beneath the sun, on fields so green,
The happiest Percy I have seen.
Your gentle spirit, light and free,
Just waiting patiently for me.

Bridge

I loved you so much, my handsome boy,
You brought my heart such boundless joy.
I'll meet you when my work is done, it's true,
Please wait for me, I'll always love you.
Forever and always, this much I know,
No more suffering, no more woe.

Instrumental - cello, synth pad

Final Chorus

Oh Percy, my sweet and handsome boy,
Sixteen long years of love and joy.
Your gentle spirit, ever near,
Washing away each doubt and fear.
Though you are gone, your memory stays,
Through all my future nights and days.

Outro - grand piano fade

Now you're outside, eating the green grass,
All pain is gone, the hard times passed.
Beneath the sunlight, you roam free,
My precious Percy, waiting there for me.
Rest easy now, my sweet, sweet friend,
Until we meet again, until the end.
